Mr. Employer: You Should Hire the Handicapped Because—

Impaired workers as a group produce at slightly higher rates than unimpaired workers on the same jobs.

Impaired persons sustain fewer disabling injuries than nonimpaired workers exposed to the same hazards.

Impaired workers have the same minor injury rates as other workers.

There is no significant difference between the voluntary quit rate of impaired workers and other workers.

Impaired workers and unimpaired workers have about the same absenteeism records.

The handicapped have the same wide range of skills, abilities and interest as the non-handicapped.

(Findings of a joint United States Department of Labor and Veterans' Administration survey of 100 plants comparing 11,000 disabled workers with 18,000 non-disabled.)
